VO from Lindsey Kirk:

Hey, everybody. It's Lindsey Kirk with Regions Entertainment and Sports Division, and with me right now is the one, the only, the incomparable entertainer Hannah Dasher. Thanks for joining me.

VO from Hannah Dasher:

Thank you, thank you. Ticked.

VO from Lindsey Kirk:

Well, Hannah, I feel like you almost need no introduction. Your TikTok speaks for itself. People have been writing about how much of a phenom you are here, but obviously you have a lot going on, maybe even stuff that people don't know about. So what's it like to be Hannah Dasher?

VO from Hannah Dasher:

Oh, heavens! I'm overrated, I guess, in that case. There's never, never a day alike. So I'm excited to be in the entertainment business.

VO from Lindsey Kirk:

Part of you is so old-school, and then part of you is on the cutting edge. How have you gone about kind of making Hannah Dasher one of a kind? What do you want people to think about when they think, you?

VO from Hannah Dasher:

I've just leaned into the things that I've loved, whether they're popular or not. I think some, like, old-school stuff is worth hanging onto like the pedal steel or big hair. I've just used the internet to showcase my lifestyle, to show that it's possible to cook like a Meemaw in your 20s and 30s and then hurry off to the Opry to play a show like Loretta Lynn and Patsy Cline did. And doing that with a ahead-of-the-curve mindset, I think, can help you have an advantage or an edge.

VO from Lindsey Kirk:

And a lot of success and notoriety you've found through platforms that this town wouldn't have known about 10 or 15 years ago. So how has it been kind of navigating that? And I know you were kind of on the forefront of all that stuff.

VO from Hannah Dasher:

A dear friend of mine, Johnny Cloherty, encouraged me. He caught wind of a new app called TikTok that was, he thought it was going to do something, and he said, you need to download this app and try to figure it out. And so I did, and having the mindset of, yeah, I might dress like Elvis, but I've always tried to be ahead of the curve. During COVID, the world shut down, we quit touring and I needed a stage. And so I made the kitchen my stage. And I thought, "Oh my God, girls my age don't know how to cook. Let me teach them how to cook like a Meemaw." And so "Stand By Your Pan" was born.

On Screen:

Hannah Dasher in her kitchen singing, "Stand by your pan..."

VO from Hannah Dasher:

And here we are. Got a Fender in one hand and a frying pan in the right.
